The assignment, registration, and control of the International Standard Serial Number (ISSN) is the responsibility of the International Serials Data System (ISDS). Set up under the auspices of UNESCO and funded by UNESCO and the participating countries, ISDS consists of an International Center (the IC/ISDS) located in Paris and a number of national and regional centers. In 1972, member countries of the United Nations were invited to create ISDS national centers which would be responsible for the registration of serials published in their respective countries through assignment of ISSN and key titles. Such centers have been designated in various nations. Nine of these centers are now operational: Argentina, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Federal Republic of Germany, Finland, Great Britain, Sweden, and the United States.

National Serials Data Program

In the United States the national center is the National Serials Data Program (NSDP) of the Library of Congress. Established in 1972, NSDP is responsible for the creation of a comprehensive data base of serials. This includes the assignment of ISSN and key titles to U.S. serials and control over the accuracy and uniqueness of these data elements. In accordance with the ISDS policy, NSDP makes assignments only for publications with a U.S. imprint. Requests for assignments for non-U.S. serials are forwarded to the appropriate ISDS national center.

The primary sources of serial records for ISSN assignment by NSDP are current cataloging of the Library of Congress, National Agricultural Library, and National Library of Medicine; publisher requests for their own titles; entries from several major scientific abstracting services; and the CONSER Project. The CONVersion of SERials (CONSER) Project is a North American computer-based serials data project that at the present time uses the Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) as the host system. The NSDP makes ISSN and key title assignments for records entered into the CONSER data base. It is also responsible for part of the effort by the Library of Congress to authenticate the accuracy of the data going into CONSER.

The NSDP informs its user community of ISSN assignments through several media—Library of Congress printed catalog cards, MARC Serials Distribution Service, and New Serial Titles for example are the major sources of ISSN data for the library world. In addition, ISSN assigned by NSDP appear in the ISDS Bulletin, a periodic listing of ISSN assigned by all ISDS centers, published by the IC/ISDS. Finally, NSDP assignments made through February 1975 appear in this ISSN-Key Title Register.

In addition, establishing and maintaining close contact with publishers is an essential part of the NSDP mission. A program is being developed to encourage publishers to display assigned ISSN on their serial publications. NSDP also furnishes assistance to publishers who request clarification of the uses and values of ISSN.

ISSN can provide a useful and economical method of communication between publishers and suppliers, making trade distribution systems faster and more efficient. ISSN can also be used in libraries for identifying titles, ordering and checking in serials, claiming missing issues, simplifying interlibrary loans, and union catalog reporting and listing. Finally, as a standard numeric identification code, the ISSN is eminently suitable for computerized file updating and linkage, retrieval and transmittal of data.

The ISSN-Title Register is published as an aid to libraries, abstracting and indexing services, subscription agencies, publishers, and other members of the information community. Its editors therefore welcome suggestions for improving the usefulness of this work. Correspondence concerning editorial matters should be addressed to the Library of Congress, Serial Record Division, Washington, D.C. 20540. Inquiries regarding distribution should be addressed to the Library of Congress, Cataloging Distribution Service, Washington, D.C. 20540.

Joseph H. Howard
Director
Processing Department

The ISSN-Key Title Register collects in one publication the serials registered by the National Serials Data Program (NSDP) of the Library of Congress from January 1973 through February 1975. This publication has been created to encourage libraries, publishers, and other segments of the information community to understand and use the International Standard Serial Number (ISSN), an internationally accepted identifier for serial publications.

The register is divided into two sections. The first is arranged in ascending order by ISSN. It is here that the full bibliographic description of the serial is found. The second section is an index to the ISSN, containing three types of entries: name (author) heading, key title, and variant title. Wherever a key title appears in the index, it is followed by the associated ISSN. The key titles for all publications issued by a corporate body are listed under the corporate entry for that body. For each variant title entered, the corresponding key title is shown, as well as the ISSN.

Filing

The filing arrangement for entries is character by character. Titles beginning with a numeral follow all titles beginning with a letter. Full stops have been added to initialisms so that they file at the head of the appropriate letter of the alphabet. Acronyms, however, are generally treated as words.

Bibliographic Conventions

Headings for name entries were determined by two different cataloging rules. During a part of the file building period NSDP was using its own corporate authority file to assure that all headings were created according to the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules. The corporate authority file was discontinued before all records listed in this publication were entered. From then on, the Library of Congress version was accepted, even if it reflected earlier cataloging rules (for example, American Library Association). The only conventions for title entries are key and variant titles as defined below.

The elements of the entries in both sections are described below. An asterisk indicates an element which appears only in the full bibliographic description. A dagger indicates an element which appears only in the index.

ISSN

In this register, the ISSN is the main access element for each record.

The ISSN is eight digits long and consists of seven digits that uniquely and unambiguously identify the serial title, plus a check digit which provides a means of catching transcription errors. The proper way to display the number is to place a hyphen between the first four digits and the last four, and to precede the entire number by the prefix "ISSN" and a space, e.g.:

ISSN 1234-5679

Unlike the ISBN (International Standard Book Number) the structure of the ISSN does not have any coded meaning. Its purpose is to provide a unique identification for a title regardless of language or country in which it is published. Once assigned, the ISSN remains attached to that serial title, whether it is current or discontinued. The ISSN is never used again for any other publication. If a continuing serial changes its title, it must be assigned a new ISSN.

Key Title

For each serial publication with an ISSN assignment there is a corresponding and unique key title—a commonly accepted form of the title which is established at the time of ISSN allocation. Derived from the title information appearing in the publication, the key title may incorporate such qualifying information as place or dates to distinguish between titles which would otherwise be identical. The key title is entered in the original language, transliterated if necessary, and in this register it is always printed in holdface.

Imprint*

The imprint for a serial publication is generally restricted to the place of publication and the name of the publisher. That practice is followed in this publication, except that all places of publication and publishers are shown if there are more than one. Dates in the imprint are given only for reprinted material.

Address of Publisher*

The street address of the publisher is given, if known. The city is not shown if it is the same as the place of publication in the imprint.

Frequency*

Standard usage has been followed to indicate the frequency with which successive issues of a serial publication appear.

Volume/Date*

If the serial is currently being published, only volume number and dates of the first issue are shown if available. If the serial ceases or undergoes a title change, the entry is closed by the appropriate volume and date, when that information is available.

Related Publications (Notes)*

These notes identify serials with related publication history, for example, preceding and succeeding titles. In most cases, a note explaining the relationship is provided (e.g., "Continued by:", "Continues:"). When an ISSN has been assigned or verified by the NSDP, it is included. When the related title is accompanied by the ISSN, it is a key title. A title listed without an ISSN is not necessarily unique and has not been registered by the NSDP.

Dewey Number*

When available, the abridged Dewey decimal number is provided at the bottom of the descriptive entry.

Variant Titles†

Variant titles are any other forms of the title by which the serial may be known. These usually appear on different parts of the serial or different portions of the title page and may include the cover title, caption title, running title, and spine title. The location of the variant title in the serial is not indicated. Parallel titles—titles of the same serial in different languages—are also included here. One is chosen as the key title (the most prominent one or, if necessary, the first one) and the other parallel titles are treated as variant forms.

Procedure for Calculating the Check Digit

The eighth or check digit of the ISSN is calculated by a method based on modulus 11 which has been found extremely effective in detecting transcription errors. Although there is no need to calculate these numbers by hand, it is useful to know how the computer can determine the accuracy of the ISSN transcription.

1. Write the digits of the basic number:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7

2. Write the constant weighting factors, 8 to 2, associated with each position of the basic number:

8 7 6 5 4 3 2

3. Multiply each digit by its respective weighting factor:

8 14 18 20 20 18 14

4. Add the multiplication products:

$8 + 14 + 18 + 20 + 20 + 18 + 14 = 112$

5. Divide the sum by 11 to find the remainder:

$112/11 = 10$ plus a remainder of 2

6. Subtract the remainder from 11. The result is the required check digit, in this case, 9:

ISSN 1234-5679

Using modulus 11, the check digit may be 10. In this case, to avoid an ISSN nine characters in length, the roman numeral X is substituted. If there is no remainder when step 5 is executed, the check digit zero is used.
